September is the month, in accordance with our by-laws, that we start the process for nomination of proposed 2024 Chapter officers with elections to be conducted at our meeting of November 11, 2023. Elected positions are: President, Vice President, Secretary, Treasurer, Registrar/Genealogist, Editor, Historian, and Chaplin. FIRST CONTINENTAL CONGRESS – SEPTEMBER 5, 1774

By Kevin Shurte

In reaction to British Parliament's passage of the Intolerable Acts of 1774, the First Continental Congress convened at Carpenter's Hall in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania on September 5th of that year. Fifty-six delegates from 12 of the 13 British colonies attended. Although many Georgians opposed British trade intervention, Georgia abstained from sending delegates to the convention due to pending conflicts with local Indian tribes and the state's dependency upon the crown for military protection.

Under the direction of Peyton Randolph of Virginia as president, delegates of the First Continental Congress established a compact among the colonies and created a singular colonial voice intent on shaping future relations with Britain. However, the aims of the several delegates varied immensely. The conservative delegations from New York and Pennsylvania had been specifically instructed to seek means through which to mend relations with Britain. Moderate delegates from the various colonies sought to establish legislative parity with Parliament. Yet the more radical elements (e.g., John Adams, Samuel Adams, and Patrick Henry) sought to "dissolve the political bands" connecting them with England. Congress held session for a total of 52 days from September 5 through October 26 in 1774. Throughout deliberations, the delegates discussed and debated the purposes of their meeting, their grievances with Parliament and the Crown, and resolutions by which to remedy these grievances and reestablish unity with Britain.

As one of its first acts, the Continental Congress endorsed the Suffolk Resolves on September 15. The Suffolk Resolves was a declaration passed in Suffolk County Massachusetts that demanded defiance of the Intolerable Acts, refused the importation of British goods, and instructed colonies to raise and train militias. On October 14, Congress adopted the Declaration of Rights and Grievances – a statement of the natural rights of Englishmen, a denunciation of taxation without representation, and a call for greater colonial autonomy and limited parliamentary influence over the colonies. On October 20, the First Continental Congress passed the Articles of Association. Like the Suffolk Resolves, the Articles established a boycott on imports from Britain and its colonies, including a ban on the slave trade, and was set to commence in December of that year if the Intolerable Acts were not repealed. The Articles further restricted the exportation of goods from Colonial America to Britain and its colonial holdings beginning in September 1775. In addition, the Articles set standards of proper etiquette for colonists to follow during the boycott such as avoiding "cock fighting, exhibitions of shews, plays, and other expensive diversions and entertainments" (National Archives Foundation).

While in place, the Articles' boycotts successfully damaged the British economy and may have contributed in part to parliament's eventual repeal of the Intolerable Acts in 1778.

Perhaps the most important outcome of the First Continental Congress is that it gave the colonies a unified body through which they could voice their disapproval with Britain's colonial policies. As a final act, congressional delegates set May 10, 1775, as the date upon which Congress would reconvene. However, by the time this date was to arrive, war would have already begun in the colonies, and Congress' attitude toward Britain would have demonstrably changed.

SAR EDUCATION CENTER AND MUSEUM

Earlier this year, the Chapter committed to financially assist SAR in meeting its goal to open the SAR Educational Center and Museum Project by 2026. While contributing $1,776 to the campaign is a modest amount compared to what is needed, we hope that our example will challenge similar donations from the 500+ chapters located nationwide. There is a brief but informative video on the project posted on YouTube: SAR Education Center and Museum - YouTube. The Chapters 2023 initiative was recognized at the 133rd National Congress where the Fort Lauderdale Chapter was awarded the Signer Level 1776 Society Certificate. In 2023, fifteen Chapter members along with funds from the John Copanos Estate made our contribution possible. The photo below lists those contributing members present at the July 29, 2023, General Membership Meeting as well as lists other contributors not present.

The Chapter's campaign for 2024 is already well underway. Fifteen of our Compatriots have already contributed. If you have not made a minimum contribution of $50.00 since notices were sent out in early August 2023, it is not too late for you to join the list of contributors for 2024 – just let us know.
